KEEP UP TO DATE

Between the time you ordered this report—which is only one of the hundreds of thousands in the NTIS information collection available to you—and the time you are reading this message, several new reports relevant to your interests probably have entered the collection.

Subscribe to the Weekly Government Abstracts series that will bring you summaries of new reports as soon as they are received by NTIS from the originators of the research. The WGA's are an NTIS weekly newsletter service covering the most recent research findings in 25 areas of industrial, technological, and sociological interest—invaluable information for executives and professionals who must keep up to date.

The executive and professional information service provided by NTIS in the Weekly Government Abstracts newsletters will give you thorough and comprehensive coverage of government-conducted or sponsored research activities. And you'll get this important information within two weeks of the time it's released by originating agencies.

WGA newsletters are computer produced and electronically photocomposed to slash the time gap between the release of a report and its availability. You can learn about technical innovations immediately—and use them in the most meaningful and productive ways possible for your organization. Please request NTIS-PR-205/PCW for more information.

The weekly newsletter series will keep you current. But learn what you have missed in the past by ordering a computer NTISearch of all the research reports in your area of interest, dating as far back as 1964, if you wish. Please request NTIS-PR-186/PCN for more information.

Keep Up To Date With SRIM

SRIM (Selected Research in Microfiche) provides you with regular, automatic distribution of the complete texts of NTIS research reports only in the subject areas you select. SRIM covers almost all Government research reports by subject area and/or the originating Federal or local government agency. You may subscribe by any category or subcategory of our WGA (Weekly Government Abstracts) or Government Reports Announcements and Index categories, or to the reports issued by a particular agency such as the Department of Defense, Federal Energy Administration, or Environmental Protection Agency. Other options that will give you greater selectivity are available on request.

The cost of SRIM service is only 45¢ domestic (60¢ foreign) for each complete microfiched report. Your SRIM service begins as soon as your order is received and processed and you will receive biweekly shipments thereafter. If you wish, your service will be backdated to furnish you microfiche of reports issued earlier.

Because of contractual arrangements with several Special Technology Groups, not all NTIS reports are distributed in the SRIM program. You will receive a notice in your microfiche shipments identifying the exceptionally priced reports not available through SRIM.

A deposit account with NTIS is required before this service can be initiated. If you have specific questions concerning this service, please call (703) 451-1558, or write NTIS, attention SRIM Product Manager.

FOREWORD

An important task of EPA's resource recovery program is to identify and promote methods to recycle the valuable materials that we now throw away. Diverting materials from the waste stream is a complex and often difficult process. But there are two approaches available to achieve resource recovery. Technological methods–which may be as simple as magnetic extraction of ferrous metals or as complex as "total" systems for energy and materials conversion–are being demonstrated throughout the country. The other approach is source separation, or "people power." The following directory testifies to the strength of citizen interest and participation in resource conservation. All the recycling projects listed, whether citizen, municipal, or industrial, serve as points of contact between individuals who wish to conserve resources and manufacturers who can reuse them as raw materials.

We hope that publication of this directory will help to expand this exciting and important grassroot movement.

RECYCLING PROJECTS

A National Directory

Following Earth Day 1970, America witnessed the emergence of a new grassroots phenomenon—the recycling center. Originated by a few small, environmentally concerned groups in isolation, the idea has spread, and today hundreds of thousands of people actively participate in recycling. Government, business, and industry have responded, and Americans in all walks of life are more aware of the need for resource conservation than they have ever been in our history.

History is precisely what the originators of the movement wished to change. Two hundred years of careless use of seemingly endless air, water, land, and raw material resources, combined with Yankee propensity to find ever new ways of increasing their use, had brought us to an impasse. The sky was seldom blue any more. Rivers and streams not only looked but smelled strange. The roar of traffic was incessant. The landscape was befouled with our burning, rotting, or rusting discards, and the trash can we put out last year had become three cans this year. As all these experiences began to accumulate in the national consciousness, a small but vocal segment of the population raised the call for a change in our priorities. A conservative estimate has been made that between 10,000 and 20,000 environmental groups have been formed in this country in the last 5 years and hundreds of thousands of citizens are enrolled as members of these groups.

The beginnings of the environmental movement were characterized by problem definition and name calling. How badly off were we? The word came back—"on the brink of disaster." "Facts" and "statistics" began to flow in, many of them incorrect. The immense proportions of the problem and the seeming inability of traditional American know-how to do anything about it led to intense frustration, frustration to anger, and anger to scapegoating. "It's industry's fault." "Government is the culprit." Labor, the war, TV, the middle class, no-deposit bottles, the petroleum lobby, automobiles, and the puritan ethic, among hundreds of other culprits, were singled out for blame. And finally, from podiums and pulpits, in school cafeteria and living room, Pogo's pronouncement that "we have met the enemy and he is us" became the watchword.

This sense of personal responsibility for much of the environmental degradation around us led to many changes in the traditional American viewpoint on the "good life." Nowhere was the desire for individual involvement more evident than in the solid waste management issue.

The recycling movement began as an effort to recover materials for reuse. In the heady days which followed Earth Day 1970, the few early centers were literally flooded with materials. In Berkeley, Ann Arbor, Baltimore, and as time progressed, in dozens of other cities, people by the thousands expressed not only the desire to waste less but their need to take an active part in improving the environment.

For those who ran the centers what appeared to be a simple procedure, "collect it and sell it," soon proved to be just the opposite. Business negotiations were necessary with haulers, secondary materials dealers, and industry. The personnel problems of finding and coordinating dozens of volunteers and providing for their safety consumed much time. Above all, the need to educate a population almost totally unaware of the complex implications of the solid waste issue took time, money, and an incredible amount of energy. Cynics were soon contending that the recycling movement would be short-lived, that people would tire of expending the extra effort to separate, that volunteers would give up, that the whole thing was a "flash in the pan." It is true that many centers have closed. But many more have opened and they have been joined by industry and by municipalities in a growing effort to save our natural resources.

City governments in increasing numbers are becoming convinced that many citizens are willing to separate a certain portion of their wastes for reuse. Three years ago, Madison, Wisconsin, had separate curbside collection of newsprint. Today more than 60 cities with separate collections are listed in the following directory and approximately 100 more have set up municipally run recycling centers. Industry has become involved through the provision of centers to handle and pay for the materials collected. Many manufacturers are actively pursuing research and development to enlarge the uses of secondary materials.

The National Recycling Project Directory is the result of many months of information gathering. The fluidity of the movement, however, precludes absolute accuracy. Many centers which are listed will have ceased to function by the time of publication; many more will have come into being. Materials accepted, contact persons, addresses, and phone numbers will have changed. A tear-off sheet is provided in the back of the book. We hope that concerned citizens will use it to inform us of any changes they have found. A second edition of this directory is planned for the spring of 1974 to incorporate these changes.

The directory is organized by State and city in alphabetical order. Many entries are incomplete due to lack of information. We hope this will be rectified by the next edition. No attempt has been made to include the days and hours of operation as these change frequently. We suggest that anyone interested in taking materials to a center or putting out materials for the city to collect call the phone number provided to get details.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The compilation of a directory of this type is a difficult task. It would not have been possible without the help of many dedicated environmentalists. In particular we wish to thank Dr. Lois Sharp and Ms. Ruth Clusen of the League of Women Voters who requested and obtained local lists of recycling projects from their national membership. Over 300 letters were received from League members from every State in the Union. We extend thanks to those women who took time from their busy schedules to gather this information for us.

Ms. Pat Taylor of the Environmental Action Coalition and Roger Bascom working with the Washington Ecology Center made their extensive national recycling lists available to us. Numerous other groups volunteered information about their own projects and others within their areas. We are deeply indebted to all those who have helped.
